Mr. Bryan Mercier
Director
Bureau of Indian Affairs
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20240

For the past two years, the Trump Administration has repeatedly obstructed congressional investigations by failing to provide the House Committee on Natural Resources with information necessary to fulfill its oversight responsibilities. As the 119th Congress comes to a close, I write to remind you and all employees of the Bureau of Indian Affairs—including all component agencies and offices—of applicable federal records preservation requirements and to request that the Bureau of Indian Affairs take adequate steps to ensure that information relevant to congressional oversight is properly preserved, saved, and archived in a manner that is readily accessible for future retrieval.

As you are aware, the Federal Records Act requires agencies to preserve records created or received in the course of official government business.[1] This obligation extends beyond paper records to any electronically stored information (ESI) that may constitute federal records. Federal records include all recorded information, regardless of form or characteristics, made or received by a federal agency under federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and preserved or appropriate for preservation by that agency or its legitimate successor as evidence of the organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, operations, or other activities of the U.S. Government or because of the informational value of data in them.[2]

As the Director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs it is your responsibility to ensure that all employees and officials within your agency understand and comply with their legal obligations to take appropriate measures to collect, retain, and preserve all documents, communications, and other records in accordance with all applicable federal laws and regulations.[3] This includes electronic messages involving official business that are sent using both official and personal accounts and devices, including records created using text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software.[4] Federal law also makes the willful and unlawful concealment, removal, alteration, or destruction of federal records, a criminal act punishable by up to three years imprisonment.[5] Accordingly, you must ensure that your employees and officials do not delete or destroy any official government records, including information created, manipulated, communicated, or stored electronically.[6]

At minimum, this obligation means securing and maintaining the integrity of all relevant documents, communications, and other information, including ESI and metadata, by taking reasonable steps to prevent the partial or full destruction, alteration, testing, deletion, shredding, incineration, wiping, relocation, migration, theft, mutation, or negligent or reckless handling that could render the information incomplete or inaccessible. This includes preserving all compilations of documents that have already been gathered in response to congressional requests, even if copies of individual documents may still exist elsewhere in the agency, and preserving all communications and messages, including those with auto-delete or expiration settings.

To ensure compliance you are specifically requested to:

1. Issue preservation instructions to relevant custodians. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify and notify all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants who may have access to potentially relevant information that they should preserve and return such information to the agency;

2. Preserve existing records collections and productions. Ensure that all records collections, document repositories, and productions assembled in response to Committee majority and/or minority requests during the 119th Congress remain intact and accessible;

3. Preserve records maintained outside federal systems. Remind all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants that any federal records sent or received using a nonofficial account must be forwarded to the agency for proper archiving;

4. Identify and recover any deleted information. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify, recover, and preserve any potentially relevant ESI and metadata that has been deleted or marked for deletion but is still recoverable; and

5. Suspend any destruction and deletion practices. If it is the practice of any relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, or consultants to destroy or otherwise alter potentially relevant information, then either halt such practices as they relate to the potentially relevant information or arrange for the preservation of complete and accurate duplicates, including metadata of such documents, communications, or other information. This includes preserving all communications and messages and disabling any ephemeral messaging features, such as disappearing message, auto-delete, or expiration settings.

If you, or other officials and/or employees at the Bureau of Indian Affairs have engaged, directed, or permitted the improper destruction, deletion, alteration, or removal of federal records or information responsive to congressional oversight (or become aware that such actions have been taken, directed, or permitted), then immediate steps must be taken to halt such practices and prevent further loss of federal records and information contained therein. If your agency has engaged in document destruction of any kind, including shredding, the use of unauthorized messaging, automatic message deletion settings, or personal email for official business, this letter serves as a formal request to cease such actions. You are expected to maintain full compliance with the Federal Records Act and any direction, request, or suggestion to others that they destroy records or allow records to be destroyed or illegally altered may be determined to violate that Act.

Please respond in writing by no later than November 23, 2026, certifying compliance with this document preservation request. In your response, please provide a description of the specific actions taken to comply with federal records laws and this preservation request. The response should address the preservation instructions issued to agency officials, the steps taken to secure potentially responsive information, and the measures implemented to prevent the destruction or loss of relevant records during the transition to the 120th Congress.

ensure that your employees and officials do not delete or destroy any official government records, including information created, manipulated, communicated, or stored electronically.[6]

At minimum, this obligation means securing and maintaining the integrity of all relevant documents, communications, and other information, including ESI and metadata, by taking reasonable steps to prevent the partial or full destruction, alteration, testing, deletion, shredding, incineration, wiping, relocation, migration, theft, mutation, or negligent or reckless handling that could render the information incomplete or inaccessible. This includes preserving all compilations of documents that have already been gathered in response to congressional requests, even if copies of individual documents may still exist elsewhere in the agency, and preserving all communications and messages, including those with auto-delete or expiration settings.

To ensure compliance you are specifically requested to:

1. Issue preservation instructions to relevant custodians. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify and notify all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants who may have access to potentially relevant information that they should preserve and return such information to the agency;

2. Preserve existing records collections and productions. Ensure that all records collections, document repositories, and productions assembled in response to Committee majority and/or minority requests during the 119th Congress remain intact and accessible;

3. Preserve records maintained outside federal systems. Remind all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants that any federal records sent or received using a nonofficial account must be forwarded to the agency for proper archiving;

4. Identify and recover any deleted information. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify, recover, and preserve any potentially relevant ESI and metadata that has been deleted or marked for deletion but is still recoverable; and

5. Suspend any destruction and deletion practices. If it is the practice of any relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, or consultants to destroy or otherwise alter potentially relevant information, then either halt such practices as they relate to the potentially relevant information or arrange for the preservation of complete and accurate duplicates, including metadata of such documents, communications, or other information. This includes preserving all communications and messages and disabling any ephemeral messaging features, such as disappearing message, auto-delete, or expiration settings.

If you, or other officials and/or employees at the Department of the Interior have engaged, directed, or permitted the improper destruction, deletion, alteration, or removal of federal records or information responsive to congressional oversight (or become aware that such actions have been taken, directed, or permitted), then immediate steps must be taken to halt such practices and prevent further loss of federal records and information contained therein. If your agency has engaged in document destruction of any kind, including shredding, the use of unauthorized messaging, automatic message deletion settings, or personal email for official business, this letter serves as a formal request to cease such actions. You are expected to maintain full compliance with the Federal Records Act and any direction, request, or suggestion to others that they destroy records or allow records to be destroyed or illegally altered may be determined to violate that Act.

Please respond in writing by no later than November 23, 2026, certifying compliance with this document preservation request. In your response, please provide a description of the specific actions taken to comply with federal records laws and this preservation request. The response should address the preservation instructions issued to agency officials, the steps taken to secure potentially responsive information, and the measures implemented to prevent the destruction or loss of relevant records during the transition to the 120th Congress.

The Honorable Brian Nesvik
Director
U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service
1849 C Street N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20240

For the past two years, the Trump Administration has repeatedly obstructed congressional investigations by failing to provide the House Committee on Natural Resources with information necessary to fulfill its oversight responsibilities. As the 119th Congress comes to a close, I write to remind you and all employees of the Fish and Wildlife Service—including all component agencies and offices—of applicable federal records preservation requirements and to request that the Fish and Wildlife Service take adequate steps to ensure that information relevant to congressional oversight is properly preserved, saved, and archived in a manner that is readily accessible for future retrieval.

As you are aware, the Federal Records Act requires agencies to preserve records created or received in the course of official government business.[1] This obligation extends beyond paper records to any electronically stored information (ESI) that may constitute federal records. Federal records include all recorded information, regardless of form or characteristics, made or received by a federal agency under federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and preserved or appropriate for preservation by that agency or its legitimate successor as evidence of the organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, operations, or other activities of the U.S. Government or because of the informational value of data in them.[2]

As the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, it is your responsibility to ensure that all employees and officials within your agency understand and comply with their legal obligations to take appropriate measures to collect, retain, and preserve all documents, communications, and other records in accordance with all applicable federal laws and regulations.[3] This includes electronic messages involving official business that are sent using both official and personal accounts and devices, including records created using text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software.[4] Federal law also makes the willful and unlawful concealment, removal, alteration, or destruction of federal records, a criminal act punishable by up to three years imprisonment.[5] Accordingly, you must ensure that your employees and officials

The Honorable Neil Jacobs
Administrator
National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration
U.S. Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Avenue N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20230

For the past two years, the Trump Administration has repeatedly obstructed congressional investigations by failing to provide the House Committee on Natural Resources with information necessary to fulfill its oversight responsibilities. As the 119th Congress comes to a close, I write to remind you and all employees of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration—including all component agencies and offices—of applicable federal records preservation requirements and to request that the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration take adequate steps to ensure that information relevant to congressional oversight is properly preserved, saved, and archived in a manner that is readily accessible for future retrieval.

As you are aware, the Federal Records Act requires agencies to preserve records created or received in the course of official government business.[1] This obligation extends beyond paper records to any electronically stored information (ESI) that may constitute federal records. Federal records include all recorded information, regardless of form or characteristics, made or received by a federal agency under federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and preserved or appropriate for preservation by that agency or its legitimate successor as evidence of the organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, operations, or other activities of the U.S. Government or because of the informational value of data in them.[2]

As the Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, it is your responsibility to ensure that all employees and officials within your agency understand and comply with their legal obligations to take appropriate measures to collect, retain, and preserve all documents, communications, and other records in accordance with all applicable federal laws and regulations.[3] This includes electronic messages involving official business that are sent using both official and personal accounts and devices, including records created using text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software.[4] Federal law also makes the willful and unlawful concealment, removal, alteration, or destruction of federal records, a criminal act punishable by up to three years imprisonment.[5] Accordingly, you must ensure that your employees and officials do not delete or destroy any official government records, including information created, manipulated, communicated, or stored electronically.[6]

At minimum, this obligation means securing and maintaining the integrity of all relevant documents, communications, and other information, including ESI and metadata, by taking reasonable steps to prevent the partial or full destruction, alteration, testing, deletion, shredding, incineration, wiping, relocation, migration, theft, mutation, or negligent or reckless handling that could render the information incomplete or inaccessible. This includes preserving all compilations of documents that have already been gathered in response to congressional requests, even if copies of individual documents may still exist elsewhere in the agency, and preserving all communications and messages, including those with auto-delete or expiration settings.

To ensure compliance you are specifically requested to:

1. Issue preservation instructions to relevant custodians. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify and notify all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants who may have access to potentially relevant information that they should preserve and return such information to the agency;

2. Preserve existing records collections and productions. Ensure that all records collections, document repositories, and productions assembled in response to Committee majority and/or minority requests during the 119th Congress remain intact and accessible;

3. Preserve records maintained outside federal systems. Remind all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants that any federal records sent or received using a nonofficial account must be forwarded to the agency for proper archiving;

4. Identify and recover any deleted information. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify, recover, and preserve any potentially relevant ESI and metadata that has been deleted or marked for deletion but is still recoverable; and

5. Suspend any destruction and deletion practices. If it is the practice of any relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, or consultants to destroy or otherwise alter potentially relevant information, then either halt such practices as they relate to the potentially relevant information or arrange for the preservation of complete and accurate duplicates, including metadata of such documents, communications, or other information. This includes preserving all communications and messages and disabling any ephemeral messaging features, such as disappearing message, auto-delete, or expiration settings.

If you, or other officials and/or employees at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration have engaged, directed, or permitted the improper destruction, deletion, alteration, or removal of federal records or information responsive to congressional oversight (or become aware that such actions have been taken, directed, or permitted), then immediate steps must be taken to halt such practices and prevent further loss of federal records and information contained therein. If your agency has engaged in document destruction of any kind, including shredding, the use of unauthorized messaging, automatic message deletion settings, or personal email for official business, this letter serves as a formal request to cease such actions. You are expected to maintain full compliance with the Federal Records Act and any direction, request, or suggestion to others that they destroy records or allow records to be destroyed or illegally altered may be determined to violate that Act.

Please respond in writing by no later than November 23, 2026, certifying compliance with this document preservation request. In your response, please provide a description of the specific actions taken to comply with federal records laws and this preservation request. The response should address the preservation instructions issued to agency officials, the steps taken to secure potentially responsive information, and the measures implemented to prevent the destruction or loss of relevant records during the transition to the 120th Congress.

3. Identify and recover any deleted information. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify, recover, and preserve any potentially relevant electronic information that has been deleted or marked for deletion but is still recoverable; and

4. Suspend any destruction and deletion practices. If it is the practice of any relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officers, contractors, subcontractors, or consultants to destroy or otherwise alter potentially relevant information, then either halt such practices as they relate to the potentially relevant information or arrange for the preservation of complete and accurate duplicates, including metadata) of such documents, communications, or other information. This includes preserving all communications and messages and disabling any ephemeral messaging features, such as disappearing message, auto-delete, or expiration settings.

Please respond in writing no later than November 23, 2026, certifying compliance with this document preservation request. In your response, please provide a description of the specific actions taken to comply with this preservation request. The Honorable Brooke Rollins
Secretary
U.S. Department of Agriculture
1400 Independence Avenue
Washington, D.C. 20250

For the past two years, the Trump Administration has repeatedly obstructed congressional investigations by failing to provide the House Committee on Natural Resources with information necessary to fulfill its oversight responsibilities. As the 119th Congress comes to a close, I write to remind you and all employees of the Department of Agriculture—including all component agencies and offices—of applicable federal records preservation requirements and to request that the Department of Agriculture take adequate steps to ensure that information relevant to congressional oversight is properly preserved, saved, and archived in a manner that is readily accessible for future retrieval.

As you are aware, the Federal Records Act requires agencies to preserve records created or received in the course of official government business.[1] This obligation extends beyond paper records to any electronically stored information (ESI) that may constitute federal records. Federal records include all recorded information, regardless of form or characteristics, made or received by a federal agency under federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and preserved or appropriate for preservation by that agency or its legitimate successor as evidence of the organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, operations, or other activities of the U.S. Government or because of the informational value of data in them.[2]

As the Secretary of Agriculture it is your responsibility to ensure that all employees and officials within your agency understand and comply with their legal obligations to take appropriate measures to collect, retain, and preserve all documents, communications, and other records in accordance with all applicable federal laws and regulations.[3] This includes electronic messages involving official business that are sent using both official and personal accounts and devices, including records created using text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software.[4] Federal law also makes the willful and unlawful concealment, removal, alteration, or destruction of federal records, a criminal act punishable by up to three years imprisonment.[5] Accordingly, you must ensure that your employees and officials do not delete or destroy any

At minimum, this obligation means securing and maintaining the integrity of all relevant documents, communications, and other information, including ESI and metadata, by taking reasonable steps to prevent the partial or full destruction, alteration, testing, deletion, shredding, incineration, wiping, relocation, migration, theft, mutation, or negligent or reckless handling that could render the information incomplete or inaccessible. This includes preserving all compilations of documents that have already been gathered in response to congressional requests, even if copies of individual documents may still exist elsewhere in the agency, and preserving all communications and messages, including those with auto-delete or expiration settings.

To ensure compliance you are specifically requested to:

1. Issue preservation instructions to relevant custodians. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify and notify all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants who may have access to potentially relevant information that they should preserve and return such information to the agency;

3. Preserve records maintained outside federal systems. Remind all relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, and consultants that any federal records sent or received using a nonofficial account must be forwarded to the agency for proper archiving;

4. Identify and recover any deleted information. Exercise reasonable efforts to identify, recover, and preserve any potentially relevant ESI and metadata that has been deleted or marked for deletion but is still recoverable; and

5. Suspend any destruction and deletion practices. If it is the practice of any relevant individuals, including current and former employees, officials, detailees, contractors, subcontractors, or consultants to destroy or otherwise alter potentially relevant information, then either halt such practices as they relate to the potentially relevant information or arrange for the preservation of complete and accurate duplicates, including metadata of such documents, communications, or other information. This includes preserving all communications and messages and disabling any ephemeral messaging features, such as disappearing message, auto-delete, or expiration settings.

If you, or other officials and/or employees at the Department of Agriculture have engaged, directed, or permitted the improper destruction, deletion, alteration, or removal of federal records or information responsive to congressional oversight (or become aware that such actions have been taken, directed, or permitted), then immediate steps must be taken to halt such practices and prevent further loss of federal records and information contained therein. If your agency has engaged in document destruction of any kind, including shredding, the use of unauthorized messaging, automatic message deletion settings, or personal email for official business, this letter serves as a formal request to cease such actions. You are expected to maintain full compliance with the Federal Records Act and any direction, request, or suggestion to others that they destroy records or allow records to be destroyed or illegally altered may be determined to violate that Act.

Please respond in writing by no later than November 23, 2026, certifying compliance with this document preservation request.
